INTRODUCTION

THIS book is a direct appeal to you to study law. It clearly demonstrates the rich rewards such study brings. It discusses each approved method of study, and it proves the wisdom of correspondence instruction.

Furthermore, it presents clean-cut proof that The Sprague Correspondence School of Law is pre-eminent-ly able to teach you law in all its branches, and to fit you for a more powerful business career, or for admission to the bar.

The various courses, each authoritative and exhaustive, are treated in detail.

The Sprague Correspondence School of Law

To all to whom these presents may come, Greeting:

Be it known, That

Harry Golden Mar Cord

of Detroit, Michigan, has for three years and six months, diligently and successfully studied the Law under our supervision and direction, such study having covered the following subjects: Elementary Law, Persons and Family Relations, Criminal Law, Torts, Real Property, Contracts, Agency, Partnership, Common Law, Pleading, Corporations, Commercial Paper, Sales of Personal Property, Bailments and Carriers, Evidence, Equity Jurisprudence, Constitutional Law, Will's and Administration of Estates, Jurisprudence and Guaranty, Insurance, Practice, Legal Ethics, General Review, and having been by us examined by answers in writing to questions propounded on the whole course of his study, and having completed the full three years' course of legal study during the time above specified we, The Sprague Correspondence School of Law, do grant him this Certificate of Graduation.

In Testimony Whereof, the President and Principal, Vice Principal, Secretary and Chief Examiner of The Sprague Correspondence School of Law, have set their hands and the corporate seal of the school to this Certificate, the twenty-first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirteen.

CHAPTER I

The Study of Law in General

Law is the essence of pure reason.

From any viewpoint, mental, moral, physical, commercial, the study of law is of the highest profit to the student. Its logic cultivates the mind, sharpens the reason; its broad common sense enlarges the understanding; the mastery of its principles perfects the memory.

It is a liberal education in broad-minded citizenship; the rock upon which a political career can be reared. If political or public life be your ambition, a knowledge of the law is indispensable. Of every hundred men in the public eye, cabinet officers, senators, congressmen, governors, more than two-thirds are men of legal training. Of our presidents, four out of five have been lawyers, and that notwithstanding the popularity of successful military men.

If law had not been the surest, best foundation for a public career; if the people had not deemed men of legal learning best fitted to serve their interests, this condition would not be fact. If you were to demand of any of these men what element in his life contributed most to his success, he would say, and unhesitatingly, the law.

Does the life of a man of business or large affairs interest or appeal to you? To prepare you for such a career, nothing equals the study of the law. If you enter the world of commerce armed with a knowledge of the law your competitors are outdistanced at the start. Of our great bankers, heads of huge business houses, captains of industry, the large majority were prepared to meet and master the great problems that confront them daily by study of the law.

In fact, many of them were selected for their present great positions because they were learned in the law—because their minds were trained to do the right kind of thinking and stored with the kind of knowledge required to handle these great enterprises.

Innumerable are the instances in every such business man's career where a knowledge of the law has enabled him to steer clear of error, mistake and loss; and innumerable also are the instances where a knowledge of the law has enabled him to grasp situations and foresee and bring about results which without it he could never have done. Without a legal education a man cannot efficiently handle thousands—with it he is competent to direct the use of millions.

If you would be a man of business; if you aspire to fame and success in public life; if you would be a right thinking and clear judging citizen; if you are ambitious of success in any line of endeavor, these facts point out the first great step in the way. They must convince you of the advantages of availing yourself of the opportunity which it is the purpose of this catalog to offer.

CHAPTER II

The Law as a Profession

Doubtless we need say little to you on this topic. But we may properly remind you that the law is an honorable, an independent, an educative and a lucrative profession.

The successful lawyer earns directly from his fees an income that is large as compared with that of the average business man of his community.

The lawyer's time is his own, and if he is willing to work and enjoys the study of the law he can make what he will of it—his opportunities are almost unlimited.

The lawyer occupies a position of prominence and influence in his community that is far and away above that of the average business man in the eyes of the people among whom he lives. As a counselor he is brought into the inner secrets of businesses, and his associations as such counselor with business men bring him opportunities for profitable investments such as come to no other man, unless possibly the banker.

No other profession or calling, therefore, offers such opportunity for independence, for prominence, for influence and for the acquisition of wealth as does the profession of the law. He is a poor lawyer indeed who cannot earn a larger income, a much better living, with the pleasure and satisfaction of an independent life, than can the teacher, the preacher or the employee in someone else's business.

The law is an educative profession. The lawyer who is actively engaged in practice is constantly learning, constantly strengthening and broadening his mind. Every new case brings a new view of the law—a new phase of it for study. To be successful in the trial of the great variety of cases that come before the lawyer, he must keep up with the times, mingle with men, and study all phases of life. The lawyer becomes, whether he wishes to or not, therefore, an educated man by force of his business.

It is true that there are failures in the law just as there are failures in every other business, profession, or calling in life, but the proportion of lawyers who are failures, or anywhere near it, is vastly smaller than is the proportion of failures among business men. It is the very prominence of the legal profession that throws its failures into the limelight and causes some people to magnify its small proportion of failures as compared with the larger proportion among business men and in other callings.

It is sometimes said that the legal profession is overcrowded. Really, it is doubtful whether it is so crowded now as it was half a century ago, considering the vast increase in business and in population. Business enterprises were then on a comparatively small scale,—now they are on a grand scale, and their management is much more complex. No great company is without its legal counsel and many companies employ enough lawyers to fill a court room. A trunk railway line not only has its leading counsel at headquarters with his corps of assistants, but it has also a legal staff in every state and a legal representative in nearly every county through which it passes. Every insurance company, too, must have its lawyers at headquarters and at every leading business center. Every coal company, every oil company, indeed every company of any kind with property interests to be guarded and business to be promoted must employ lawyers. There may be many lawyers, but there is much work for them to do. At no time in the history of this country probably has the profession offered so many or such great opportunities to its well-prepared members who are willing to work for success.

The Sprague Correspondence School of Law aims to furnish that legal training and education which will fit students to enter upon the practice of law in any part of the country; to impart an accurate knowledge of the principles of the law; to illustrate the application of those principles to the practical affairs of life—to teach students both to know and apply the law.

CHAPTER III

“Reading Law” and “Studying Law”

“Reading Law” will not make a lawyer, nor give a business man an adequate knowledge of the law for his business.

“Desultory reading is waste of life,” as Rufus Choate so wisely said. To no subject of study does this apply more forcibly than to the law.

To become a successful practicing lawyer or business man you must “study” law. You must have the right books. You must know where to begin. You must know what is vital to your interests and what is valuable only for reference purposes. In other words, and most emphatically, you must know how to study law, and not merely read it.

You must study in such a way as to remember—to learn. You must read in such a way as to learn to reason for yourself, to apply principles to facts. You must get the legal mind which arrives at right conclusions.

Such results cannot be accomplished by haphazard reading, or by picking up and devouring any law book that comes to hand. It requires systematic, continued, logical, progressive, patient study with the proper guidance of skilled and experienced teachers of the law.

The reason for most of such failures as do occur in the legal profession is that men have attempted to study law unaided, or worse still, have entrusted their instruction to men who themselves never had systematic, scientific law school training and are therefore not qualified to give it to others.

CHAPTER IV

The Purposes and Plans of The Sprague Correspondence School of Law

Our Object

The object of The Sprague Correspondence School of Law is to make a thorough, complete legal education a possibility for those who cannot conveniently attend one of the best resident university or college law schools.

As David Starr Jordan, President of Leland Stanford University, in speaking of correspondence teaching, has so well said, "If there are ambitious young men and young women who cannot go to college, the college can in a very wide and true sense come to them."

Thus, if you cannot conveniently go to one of the best college or university law schools, it is our purpose to bring the university law school course to you right in your own home, so that you may get such a course with its benefits and the guidance and instruction of experienced and able teachers who are making the teaching of law their business, in your spare time without the loss of a day's work or a dollar of income from your regular business or employment—and at a cost that is within your reach.

Our Scope

We offer you a course of instruction that will give you a knowledge of the law sufficient to pass any bar examination, when you are ready to take that examination under the rules of the supreme court of the state in which you wish to be admitted, and which will fit you to take up the practice of the profession to the same extent that a university law school course would so fit you. See the rules.

We offer you in our College Law Course the same course as you would receive at the best resident university law schools. The text-books to be studied and the instruction to be given by us are the same as you would receive at such institutions. The only difference is in the method by which we impart that instruction.

We offer you a course in Business Law that will equip the man in business with a knowledge of the law that will be invaluable to him in his every-day transactions, that is full enough to be of real, practical, dependable value in his business; that will enable him to protect himself against mistakes and losses on the one hand and on the other to see and grasp many opportunities that otherwise he would not recognize and to plan many profitable deals that without such knowledge he would not know how to plan.

We teach by mail. No classes are received in personal attendance. Our method of study and instruction may be described as a combination of the text-book method, the lecture method, and the case study method.

Our Method

You take up one subject at a time. We send you the prescribed text-book on that subject, a quiz-book and a set of lesson sheets which explain the text-book. The first paragraph of each sheet assigns the portion of the text-book to be studied for the day's lesson.

The main portion of the lesson sheet is headed "Explanations and Added Notes." Under this head we give you all the general helps, explanations and instruction relating to the particular lesson that we can anticipate students in general will find beneficial. And we explain such additional points or rules of law as we think it will be advantageous for you to know at that time, but which are not covered by the text-book. This part of the sheet is designed to take the place of the running talk that a professor might give his class on the day's lesson, but it covers the lesson much more minutely and fully than could be expected of an oral talk.

We do not pretend that we can anticipate all of every student's needs or difficulties in this way, for some points will be clear and plain to one student but difficult or doubtful to others. In such cases you will be expected to write us for the personal help and instruction that you need, coming to us by letter just as you would expect to go personally to your teacher if attending a resident school and you needed help.

The next paragraph in the lesson sheet directs you to the case or cases to be read in connection with the day's lesson, if you are studying the illustrative case books offered in connection with the course.

The final paragraph of the lesson sheet directs you to answer the designated questions in the quiz-book that apply to the day's lesson. This feature of the work is intended to take the place of the recitation work in the resident schools and to apply it to the correspondence method as fully as may be. It is more thorough than class recitation work in this, that the correspondence student must answer every question on each point in the day's lesson, whereas in a class one student can seldom be given more than one question a day with the result that he loses much of this valuable exercise and work.

On the completion of each subject you will be given a full, searching examination thereon which you must pass before taking up the next subject. Your answers to the examination questions are returned to you after we have carefully gone over them, marked and graded them. In returning the papers to you a letter is also sent you by the examiner, giving such personal help, explanations, instructions, criticisms and suggestions as long experience in this kind of work teaches us will be helpful to you in view of the way you have answered the questions.

A grade of eighty per cent is required to pass any subject, but no charge is made for the review and extra examination required if you fail to obtain the passing mark.

This method is pursued throughout the course. At its completion you will be given a final examination consisting of twelve hundred questions, covering the whole course from beginning to end. This definitely prepares you to pass the bar examination, because it refreshes your mind on the entire field of the law.

Our Claims

We claim that we offer to the ambitious man or woman who cannot conveniently attend one of the best resident college or university law schools, the best method of acquiring a scientific, systematic and full legal education that is obtainable, and that so far as thoroughness is concerned, our method, service and instruction cannot be surpassed.

If you can conveniently attend one of the best resident college or university law schools, do so. If you cannot, then let us bring the university law school to you and give you its course right in your own home with the university grade and character of guidance and instruction, and enable you to master that course in your spare time—the odds and ends of your time which, added together, amount in the course of years to time for an education, but which you are now using in ways that will not bring you any betterment of your present condition and prospects in life.

The study of law by correspondence is infinitely superior to studying in a law office. This is not only admitted but asserted by practically all well-informed lawyers and by practically all university law school professors.

Superior to Study in a
Law Office

The busy lawyer has little time to give you. He has his own business and clients to look after. Naturally he looks upon your interests and your instruction as secondary—as only a side issue to him or as an accommodation to you.

Even though the lawyer be properly educated, he is not necessarily a good teacher. Not every man is a good teacher merely because he knows a subject. The art of teaching is one not easily acquired and not possessed by every man. He must learn to teach before he can teach—and few lawyers have learned.

Even if the lawyer is qualified properly to systematize and guide your studies, he cannot be expected to give them his best time, thought, interest, attention and effort as would teachers who are making the teaching of law their business. Neither can he be expected to have the latest and best textbooks for you to study—such books as the university would prescribe for you.

You will naturally be expected to give more or less time to his work and affairs, which will be a detriment to your own studies.

A law office is the best place in the world in which to get practical experience in a lawyer's work, and about the poorest place in the world in which to obtain a systematic education in the science and theory of the law. This is evidenced by the large number of practicing lawyers who, after getting into the active work of the profession, realize the defects and deficiencies of the law office method of study and come to us for a thorough, systematic law school course, so they may have the proper preparation for their professional work, that they should have obtained in the beginning.

We enable you to gain a thorough legal education without loss of time from your usual employment or business and without the loss of a day's income.

Advantages

The proper use of your spare time only—the time which you and we and every man consciously or unconsciously wastes every day, or which is at least not so profitably employed, will enable you to complete our course and obtain admission to the bar if that be your object.

Remember

Our course enables you to live at home while pursuing your studies and so to save the extra expense of board and lodging away from home.

That our course gives you a knowledge of the law sufficient to fit you to pass any bar examination, when you are ready to take it according to the rules of your supreme court.

That it is equivalent to the college or university law school course in its scope.

That we give you the benefit of university trained teachers with long experience in the correspondence method of instruction.

That we systematize your studies and present them to you in a manner and form that guarantees your understanding them thoroughly.

That we give you our personal attention and that every student is a class by himself. In other words, that you will be treated and your needs looked after and taken care of personally and individually instead of your being considered simply as a member of a class or group.

That you can pay for our course in cash in advance or monthly in small installments.

WE GUARANTEE
THE EFFICIENCY OF OUR COURSE
AND
THE QUALITY OF OUR INSTRUCTION

CHAPTER V

Can the Law be Taught by the Correspondence Method?

Successfully
Done for over
Twenty-three Years

Prior to 1890 that question might have been asked with reason, for the answer, whether affirmative or negative, could then be only a theory. It had never been tried. Since then the question has answered itself in the affirmative, and more than twenty-three years' results back up and support that answer.

Some men who have obtained their education in other ways, out of jealousy, prejudice or lack of acquaintance with correspondence methods, may still claim that correspondence instruction is inadequate and that the law cannot be so taught, but the overwhelming proofs of the past twenty-three years have made this number very small. Furthermore, there are now many thousands of living, breathing, irrefutable answers to these doubts and denials, in the persons of men who obtained their legal education through the correspondence method and who are now in the active and successful practice of the profession.

We have enabled others to become successful lawyers, we can enable you to become a successful lawyer.

The successes of our students and graduates at bar examinations and in the practice of the profession conclusively prove the sufficiency of our course, the efficiency, and above all, the practicability of our method, and the excellence and thoroughness of our service and instruction, for after all is said and done, it is results that count and doubts and theories must always give way to facts.

Actual results—our successful students—are the proofs we point to.

Among our graduates we may number at least one governor of a state, several congressmen, many judges, many state senators and representatives, innumerable state, county and city officers, men prominent in civil life and leaders of the bar in their respective communities.

In the face of the fact that the law has been practically and thoroughly taught by correspondence, as is conclusively proved by thousands of men who have thus been enabled to pass bar examinations and enter upon the practice of the profession successfully in competition and on a par with university trained students, no doubt can remain.

It will not do to say that a thing cannot be done when as a matter of fact it is being done and has been done regularly for more than twenty-three years.

In all of the more than twenty-three years of the existence of this school, we have heard of only four of its graduates who have failed in their bar examinations, and some of these passed on their second attempt. When you consider the thousands that were successful and the handful only that failed, this constitutes the most complete, conclusive and convincing evidence of the practicability and success of our methods and service that any reasonable man can require. Thousands of leading educators frankly admit that correspondence instruction is one of this country's greatest educational factors; that correspondence schools are doing more to raise the general average of education and intelligence in this country and to offer educational opportunities to men to whom they would otherwise be denied by reason of business or circumstances than any other factor, institution or group of institutions in America today.

The Sprague Correspondence School of Law is the oldest correspondence school in the world. This was the first correspondence school in any line to be regularly established, and our long experience has brought our methods and service to the highest point of excellence.

CHAPTER VIThe Text-Books Used*Recognized
Standard
Text-Books

We use the leading text-books on the subjects that we teach. They are not books that we have published to sell to our students. They are issued by the leading law book publishers of the country and in every instance have been written either by a prominent university law school professor, or by a famous recognized law book writer.

We have selected books by men who know how to write the kind of a law book for law students so that they may be taught what they ought to know, and so that it may be taught to them in the best way.

On each subject the book selected is the one which we consider the best for our students' use, and is one that is recognized by educators, practicing attorneys and courts as a standard authority on its subject.

Furthermore, they are the books that are used in the leading resident university law schools, and on each subject we have selected the one which we consider expresses its rules and propositions most clearly and which makes the study easiest and most beneficial to the student.

Nucleus of a Library

These text-books will form the nucleus of your law library. They will be useful to you every day of your professional life. (See list, pages 20-24, and illustrated sheet.)

Quiz-Books

These quiz-books consist of two parts. Part I contains the questions with blank leaves on which you are to write your answers to those questions. Part II contains the correct answers with which you may compare your answers after they are written, so as to furnish you an immediate test of the thoroughness of your work and of the correctness of your understanding of what you have studied.

Every day you are required to answer in writing the number of questions covering that day's lesson. You will be put upon your honor to write your answers without referring to the text-book, lesson sheets, or the answers in Part II of the quiz-book.

How Used

This exercise corresponds to the recitation which the professor would require of a class in a university or other resident school.

Recitation Work

It is the recitation work of the resident schools applied to the correspondence method of instruction. Every educator recognizes that there is no more important factor in instruction than the recitation. No other correspondence school of law offers you this feature. We require every student to recite on every point in every lesson, instead of giving him only an occasional point upon which to recite.

This necessitates a thorough study of the whole lesson, every paragraph, every line, every word of it. No student can shirk or slight his work under this system.

Compels Thoroughness

THE CORRESPONDENCE METHOD OF INSTRUCTION AS PRACTICED BY THIS SCHOOL IS NO METHOD FOR THE SHIRKER. IT IS FOR THE MAN WHO EARNESTLY WANTS TO LEARN AND WHO TAKES THE COURSE TO GET ALL THE BENEFIT FOR HIMSELF THAT HE CAN.

We believe in the study of illustrative cases. Many students also desire them. Many others, however, feel that they cannot afford the time and expense for their study. We wish to assist the former as fully as we can and to accommodate the latter as best we may.

Illustrative Cases Furnished, but Charged for Separately

We have therefore had collected into book form illustrative cases on nearly every branch of the law, these books being known as Sprague's Illustrative Cases.

In order to avoid an injustice to those students who cannot study the cases, we have omitted them entirely in figuring the charge for our course, making a separate charge for them where they are desired. In order to enable and encourage as many of our students as possible to use them, however, we have had these books manufactured as cheaply as possible with manila binding and will sell them to our students at what is practically their cost of manufacture, namely, a uniform price of $1.25 per volume.

Study Urged, but not Required

The lesson sheets on each subject tell the student what case or cases to read in connection with each lesson.

From the financial standpoint it is immaterial to us whether you take these cases or not. From the instruction standpoint and from your own standpoint, it is important that you take them and study them if you can.

Examinations

Special Examinations

At frequent intervals we give special examinations covering each individual subject. We demand a high standard of work of our students. The passing grade of eighty must be obtained on each examination or you will be required to review the subject and take another examination thereon. No extra charge is made for this extra review and examination work.

Final Examination

At the end of the course we give a thorough, searching final examination in connection with our work on final review, which covers the entire body of the law. It refreshes the student's mind on all of the branches that he has studied throughout the course and prepares him thoroughly for his bar examination.

By means of these features of our work, we drill you so thoroughly and instruct you so fully that you cannot fail to master the law if you will do your part and study. We do everything in our power to make a lawyer of you. We cannot study for you,—you alone can do that, but if you do your part we will do ours, and working together we will accomplish the object of your ambition.

CHAPTER VII

Time Required

Three Years' Course

Our Complete College Law Course is a three years' course. By studying one lesson each day five days a week for three years the student will complete it.

It is a three years' course, because the statutes of the majority of the states require that the applicant for admission to the bar shall have studied not less than that length of time.

In states which require only two years' study or less, the first two years of our course will be sufficient to enable you to pass the bar examination, but every student who aspires to success in the profession of the law should take our Complete College Law Course, omitting nothing, whether the requirements for admission to the bar in his state make it necessary or not. You should realize that mere admission to the bar is the least important thing in the making of a lawyer. It will make a man an attorney, but only a full and thorough knowledge of the law can make a man a real lawyer. The more you know, the greater will be your success.

Two Year

If the average student will put two or three hours' study on his work each day he will finish the course on schedule time. You are not required to do that, however, for what we offer in a scholarship is a certain course of legal study with the help, guidance and instruction, books and supplies that will enable you to master that course in due time.

We do not charge for periods of time, but for the course and the work, as this school was established to serve the purpose of busy men and women. It permits you to progress as rapidly or as slowly as your circumstances and opportunities for study dictate or permit. The only requirement on our part is that you must do good, thorough work, whether you go rapidly or slowly. You may complete the course in less than the schedule period if you are able, or you may take several times that period if you must, and there will be no extra charge on that account.

Spare Time Only

For convenience in arrangement, the Complete College Law Course is divided into six semesters, each of which consists of six months' work according to the study schedule, which schedule is furnished you for the purpose of helping you to systematize your work and not for the purpose of dictating your rate of progress.

Divisions of the Course

CHAPTER VIII

The Complete College Law Course

What It Is

The Complete College Law Course is the course that prepares you for the bar.

It contains the subjects required by state statutes and supreme court rules for admission to the bar.

It is a course that gives you a complete, thorough, competent legal education which fits you to take up the active practice of the law and to care for such legal business as shall come to you.

In short, it prepares you as fully as any law course can for all and everything that a practicing lawyer must do.

What We Furnish

For our course we simply make one charge which covers everything that we require our students to have for its study, instead of making a separate charge for tuition, books and supplies to be extra. In other words, for this one charge we furnish the tuition, the prescribed text-books, quiz-books, lesson sheets, examination sheets and the personal help, service and instruction that are required, prepaying the delivery charges, that is, the postage or expressage, on everything that we send to our students.

What the Course Consists Of

FIRST YEAR—Price $60.00

First Semester

Elementary Law, giving the student a bird's-eye view of the whole field of the law as an introduction to or foundation for the fuller study of its various branches in their own respective text-books. The text-book used is Smith's Elementary Law.

Persons and Domestic Relations, including the laws governing the relations between husband and wife, parent and child, guardian and ward, employer and employee, and the subject of marriage and divorce. The text-book used is Tiffany on Persons and Domestic Relations.

Criminal Law, including all the various crimes known to the law with their definitions, the acts and elements constituting each, and the general principles of criminal law. The text-book is Hawley & McGregor on Criminal Law.

Torts, including what constitutes a tort, the subjects of fraud and deceit, slander and libel, assault and battery, trespass, false imprisonment, infringement of patents and copyrights, malicious prosecution, nuisance, damage by animals, escape of dangerous things, etc. The text-book is Bigelow on Torts.

Real Property, including all branches of real estate law, the nature of real property, fixtures, estates, mortgages and deeds, uses, trusts and powers, title to real property, wills with relation to real estate, and land contracts. The text-book is Hawley & McGregor on the Law of Real Property.

Second Semester

Contracts, including the elements of a contract, its formation, consideration, capacity of parties to make a contract, operation, assignment, interpretation, discharge of contracts, rules of construction, breach of contract, and the statute of frauds. The text-book is Anson on Contracts.

Agency, including the formation of the relation of principal and agent, the legal effect of the relation as between the principal and the agent, the legal effect of the relation as between the principal and third parties, the legal effect as between the agent and third parties, master and servant in its relation to the law of agency, the liability of principal or master for torts and crimes of the servant or agent, the liability of servant or agent for torts, and the liability of third persons for torts to the master or principal on the one hand or to the agent or servant on the other. The text-book is Huffcut on Agency.

Final Review. This course gives the student a brief but clear and full review of his previous studies in all the branches of the law, so as to refresh his mind and prepare him for a bar examination. It is in connection with this course that the final examination embracing some 1200 questions is given. The text-book is Robinson's Elementary Law.

CHAPTER IX

The Business Law Course for Business Men

Price $60.00

This course is for those who do not desire to study law for the purpose of practicing it, but for general information or for the value and assistance that such knowledge will be to them in their regular business. It is the most thorough course in commercial law offered by any school in the country. Briefer and cheaper courses may be obtained, but they are valuable principally as illustrating the old maxim, "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing."

In the subjects that our course embraces, we give students exactly the same course, books and instruction that we give students in our regular Complete College Law Course who are studying those subjects to prepare themselves for the practice of the profession and to advise business men. Since it is sufficient for that purpose, it is sufficient to be of real practical value to the business man who studies it.

In building this course we have simply lifted bodily out of the regular College Course the work on these subjects and grouped them together as a Business Law Course. It embraces those subjects that are of special interest to business men, leaving out such subjects as Practice, Pleading, Evidence, etc., that are of interest to those only who intend to practice law in the courts as a profession. Studied at the schedule rate of five lessons a week it amounts substantially to one year's work.

The charge for the course, as we have already explained, includes the prescribed text-books, quiz-books, lesson sheets, examinations, as well as the tuition and personal help and instruction that you may desire throughout the course. In other words, the regular charge for this course includes every required expense. It does not, however, include case books, the use of which

OUR YARD O

The above illustration shows in miniature the set of standard law books used in the College Law Course of The Sprague Correspondence School of Law. In their actual size they measure a little over one yard in length and make an imposing array

LAW BOOKS

In addition to the above text-books we furnish our students twenty-two quiz-books and approximately one thousand lesson sheets, examination sheets, etc., 7½ by 12 inches. Case-books on the various subjects may also be obtained where desired. All of the foregoing except the case-books are included in the tuition charge.

is optional with you. The subjects included in this course, full descriptions of which may be found in the description of the Complete College Law Course, are as follows:

FIRST SEMESTER.

Contracts, Agency, Partnership.

SECOND SEMESTER.

Corporations, Bills and Notes or Commercial Paper, sales of Personal Property, and the Law of Real Property.

In this course seven text-books and seven quiz-books are furnished—the same books used by the students in the Complete College Law Course in studying those subjects, and not merely business college books on commercial law.

This Business Law Course as compared with any other commercial law course has this advantage—that if after completing it, the student desires to study the full College Law Course he can do so without having to take these subjects again. It will merely be necessary for him to take up the subjects of the College Law Course that have not been studied by him in the Business Law Course. In other words, it will entitle him to one year's credit on the College Law Course.

CHAPTER X

Special Courses

As some students, especially practicing lawyers, desiring either review or postgraduate work, wish only one or a few subjects, and not the Complete College Law Course, we are prepared to sell to students such subjects or divisions of our course as they may desire. In other words, you may buy a Special Course on Criminal Law, or the Law of Real Property, or any of the other subjects named as they are set forth in the description of the Complete College Law Course, including the text-book, quiz-book, lesson sheets, examination and tuition, everything the same as if you were taking that subject as a part of a full course with us, at the prices set forth below:

If Case Books are desired they will cost $1.25 additional on the subjects on which we can furnish them.

CHAPTER XI

Expenses in Detail—Every Dollar of Cost

The following is an accurate statement of actually how much it will cost you to take either of the courses of The Sprague Correspondence School of Law. As a result of many years of experience we have become convinced that these rates are the cheapest at which any institution can afford to properly and thoroughly teach law by correspondence. A lower rate than this must be at the expense of the student, for a correspondence school is an expensive institution to conduct. If its rates are lower, its service and instruction must, of necessity, be poorer. Therefore, what appears to be a saving is actually a loss. In the matter of preparing for your life work, the best is certainly the cheapest.

Through our years of experience we have brought our courses, service and instruction to the highest possible point of excellence and our expense of doing business to the lowest point consistent with the grade and character of service and instruction that you ought to have. These rates are the results of that experience and are reasonable and fair in proportion to what we give for the money.

These charges in each case include everything that we require students to have and everything that we even recommend them to get, except the case books and a law dictionary, which are valuable but which you can get along without. They include even the expressage or postage on everything that we send to you, whether books, lesson sheets or letters.

Methods of Payment

These charges may be paid either by cash in advance by the year, or on the installment plan, $5.00 at the time of enrollment and $5.00 each and every month until the price for the year's work as laid out in the course, or a total of $60.00, has been paid.

The Business Law Course

(A Course for Business Men)

One Year's Work, with prescribed books and supplies.....$60.00

Complete College Law Course

First Year, first and second semesters.....$60.00

Second Year, first and second semesters..... 60.00

Third Year, first and second semesters..... 60.00

The Complete College Law Course is just what its name implies—complete. It is the same course that you would receive at the best resident law colleges and universities. It will give you the knowledge of the law necessary to enable you to pass the bar examination and take up the practice of law in your state or any other state when you are ready to take such examination according to the rules governing admission to the bar therein, as it has many others before you.

If you study at the rate of one lesson per day five days in the week, each semester will take you six months, and each year's work one year's time, but you are not required to finish a year's work in a year's time. You can go more rapidly or more slowly, according to your own circumstances and opportunities for studying. We sell you a scholarship entitling you to so much of the course and to so much work. We do not sell you a limited period of time.

Each student receives individual and personal attention and instruction, and his work and needs are looked after individually. He is treated not simply as if he were a member of a class. It is personal service as compared with class service.

CHAPTER XII

Certificates and Diplomas

At any time during the course, this school, on request, will furnish the student a certificate covering the amount of work that he has done with us. Sometimes the student wants a certificate of this kind when seeking advanced standing in a resident law school or when presenting himself for examination for admission to the bar.

Whether the student asks for it or not, we present to him at the close of each study, after he has passed the examination thereon, a certificate to the effect that he has accomplished the work required on that subject. In this way the student has at regular intervals a certificate at hand of what he has accomplished, even though it be not the entire course.

At the end of the course on taking the final examination, the student is given a diploma, or certificate of graduation, similar to those presented their graduates by the resident universities and colleges. This diploma is suitable for framing if the graduate so desires.

CHAPTER XIII

Points Emphasized

These distinguishing features of The Sprague Correspondence School of Law have been described on preceding pages, but to impress you anew with their value to you as a prospective student, we summarize them here.

The Sprague Correspondence School of Law is the oldest correspondence school of law in the world.

It is the oldest correspondence school in the world teaching any branch of knowledge.

It was fully two years after this school was founded before any other school attempted a like work.

Its course of instruction has been improved by re-writing and re-printing six times during the twenty-three years of its history.

Unlike a newer institution, it does not have to experiment on you, it has developed its courses and knows that they are right.

Its instructors are all college trained men and were at one time practicing lawyers. They gave up the practice for the purpose of devoting their energies to correspondence instruction.

It is the only correspondence school of law in the world that uses the combined text-book, lecture sheet, quizzer and case systems.

In its twenty-three years' history the business methods of this school have never been criticized or called into question.

It is incorporated with ample capital and has unlimited credit with the business community.

It has the confidence and esteem of the community in which it is located, and reference generally is made to any bank or business house, judge or practicing lawyer in the City of Detroit.

Surely, such an array of equipment for thorough, masterful legal training is proof positive that we are pre-eminently fitted to teach you. This school has successfully taught the law to hundreds of students in every state and territory in the United States, on the islands of the sea, and in every civilized country on the globe. Distance constitutes no disadvantage.

It gives you the opportunity to pursue your studies at home or while traveling, or where you may choose, with a definite plan of study, frequent examinations, economy, and the fact that you may go fast or slow, as your circumstances require.

Two or three hours per day properly applied will enable you to complete the course, according to the regular study schedule, but if you only have thirty minutes a day you can do the work, though it will take you longer than the time specified. Others have succeeded under those circumstances, so can you.

It offers traveling men the only opportunity possible for obtaining a legal education. Hundreds of them have taken advantage of this opportunity.

If your work is interrupted for a time you can take it up again where you left off as soon as circumstances permit, and as our scholarships are unlimited as to time, you will have lost nothing by the delay.

It offers practicing lawyers the best possible opportunity for thorough, systematic review or for further study. Hundreds of our students have been practicing lawyers and there will be hundreds more as time goes on. By all means enroll with us, and now!

CHAPTER XIV

Finally—A Note of Warning

The continued success of The Sprague Correspondence School of Law has encouraged the springing up all over the country of so-called correspondence schools of law. The idea seems to prevail in some quarters that all that is needed to establish and maintain a successful correspondence school is to advertise or send out solicitors and take the money.

For some years we have noticed this tendency, but have said nothing about it, believing that these institutions would kill themselves; many of them have done so, but others are springing up to take their places, most of them only to repeat the experience of those that have gone before.

We have, therefore, come to feel that it is our duty to warn prospective students against enrolling with any correspondence school of law without the most rigid investigation.

A new school in this line is born every few months. The advertisements put forth by these new institutions are often misleading, and the prospective student who has not the means of judging of the respective merits of the schools by actual experience with them is liable to waste his time and lose his money. Some of these new schools represent themselves as having been long established, whereas such is not the fact; some of them represent that they have a faculty composed of leading members of the bar, whereas in fact, the only connection such individuals have with these schools is merely the lending of their names, or, at most, the writing of a few essays, or lectures, which, having been done, ends their connection with the institution. One school that has been advertising extensively, when applied to for its catalogue of particulars and prospectus, replied that it had not yet prepared them, but would soon do so, asking the inquirer in the meantime not to decide upon a school until he had received the same. How much confidence can one have in an institution that advertises a thoroughly prepared course, when the fact is that not even its prospectus is in print?

We therefore sound this note of warning!

We do not give this warning from fear that our own prosperity may be materially lessened by the springing up of these irresponsible institutions. Our school is now enjoying the greatest prosperity that it ever enjoyed. No doubt some of the money which otherwise would have come to us has gone to some of these institutions. We do not regret so much the diverting of money into other channels as we regret that correspondence instruction has suffered in this way, and that men have been induced to give up their money without adequate returns.

Many of these schools offer greatly reduced rates, some of them charging a merely nominal sum. We here distinctly assert that no school can give first-class instruction for the money at which instruction is offered by most of these schools. If first-class instruction is given by these schools, it is given at a loss, and we are not prepared to believe that any of these institutions are maintained as a charity. If the instruction given is poor, costing the school little or nothing, it is possible that the institution may eke out a bare existence and continue to keep its name before the public; it does so, however, at the expense of its students.

Recently there was shown us some of the so-called lessons sent to a student by a correspondence school that widely advertises and makes the point that its instruction is given at a merely nominal cost, and in some cases offers it practically free. An examination of the lessons shows that it is merely a book-selling scheme, the student being required to pay little if any fee, but being obliged to buy a lot of books, and not being allowed to buy them elsewhere than from the school. The lessons are of the most elementary and most unsatisfactory nature. Such instruction is a fraud upon the public and tends to bring all correspondence instruction into disrepute.

If you intend to seriously study law, meaning it to become the foundation of your career, you should get the best; the few dollars that make up the difference between the poor and the best, should not for a moment be considered. If you are unable to take good instruction now you should wait until you can do so, for poor instruction is oftentimes worse than none at all.

CHAPTER XV

High Praise from Those Who Know

Of the thousands of commendatory letters that we are constantly receiving, those which follow are fair samples. They show the thoroughness and efficiency of our course, methods and service, what they have enabled others to accomplish, what they can therefore enable you to accomplish. Can you ask stronger testimony? These letters are worth your careful reading.

FROM A FOREMOST UNIVERSITY PROFESSOR.

Prof. Charles A. Graves, now of the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va., while Dean of the Law Department of the Washington and Lee University, wrote to one of our students: "It gives me pleasure to speak in terms of high commendation of The Sprague Correspondence School of Law. My opinion of it is based upon my observation of the number of their graduates who have afterwards taken our law course and upon the testimony of their students. One of their students took our course in one year and graduated second in his class. Of course, as the Sprague School has often stated, the study of law by correspondence cannot fully take the place of the regular law school, nor supply the advantages of personal intercourse with one's teachers and fellow students, but it is the next best thing—far superior to the study of law in an office."

THREE STUDENTS PASS IN ONE EXAMINATION IN OKLAHOMA, MEETING THAT STATE'S SEVERE REQUIREMENTS—FIRST AND THIRD HONORS.

Foss, Oklahoma, Dec. 17, 1910.

Gentlemen:

I here enclose you a copy of the "Foss Enterprise" which gives an account of my passing the Bar examination at Guthrie. I came out head man in the examination in the grades and received a great ovation in the Supreme Court room at Guthrie for the honors I had attained in the examination. I thought you would be interested to hear and so I write you this letter.

Respectfully,

W. J. O'HARA.

COMMISSIONERS OF THE LAND OFFICE, State of Oklahoma

Guthrie, Dec. 10, 1910.

Dear Mr. Cotner:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of the diploma sent me and to assure you that I prize the same very highly. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to inform you that I have just stood the bar examination in this state and passed the same with comparative honors, being the third man in a class of sixty-five, among whom were Harvard, Yale, Ann Arbor, Vanderbilt, and other college men. I made an average grade on the sixteen subjects on which I was examined of 90 per cent., the high man only going forty points above me on the total of the grades for the sixteen subjects. I am now admitted to practice in all the courts of Oklahoma and want to assure you that I feel that to your splendid institution is due a great deal of the credit.

Thanking you for past favors and assuring you of my good wishes, good will, and assistance, if possible, I am,

Yours very truly,

(Signed) R. P. WYATT.

LYNCH-FORSYTHE SCHOOL, Ray S. Fellows, Principal.

Tulsa, Oklahoma, Jan. 6, 1911.

Gentlemen:

I passed the Oklahoma bar examination the first week in December, along with two other Sprague students in a class of more than sixty. My grade was 88½, the highest being but a few points higher. There were applicants who graduated from Yale, Harvard, Chicago, Michigan, and all the other strong law schools in the country, but few of them got a higher grade than I did.

Wishing to thank you for all that I have gotten out of your course, and adding that I shall, at all times, be glad to recommend the Sprague School to would-be lawyers, I remain,

Very sincerely yours,

RAY S. FELLOWS.

(Mr. Fellows had not completed our course when he took the Bar Examination.)

THE SPRAGUE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF LAW

FROM THE DEAN TO A PROSPECTIVE STUDENT.

The University of Minnesota,

Minneapolis, Nov. 26, 1910.

Your letter of the 21st was duly received. We have no correspondence department connected with our college. If you wish to study by correspondence, I would refer you to the Sprague Correspondence School of Law, at Detroit, Michigan.

Yours very truly,

W. S. PATTEE,
(Dean.)

A NEW ENGLAND STUDENT SUCCEEDS.

Berlin, N. H., April 22, 1913.

Dear Sir:

Answering your inquiry, I found The Sprague Correspondence Law Course very good indeed. Their text-books are fine and their lessons are easy to comprehend and instructive, and I have no hesitancy in recommending it very highly to you.

For your own judgment as to the value of the course, I will state that at the time I took the bar examination there were students from Boston University and Harvard Law School, and that I took no instruction in law but the Sprague Correspondence Course, yet my examination ranked the highest of any in the class.

Yours very truly,

OVIDE J. COULOMBE.

PASSES NEW YORK BAR EXAMINATION.

2 Rector Street, New York, N. Y.

November 2, 1909.

Gentlemen:

It will please you to know that I have been admitted to the Bar of the State of New York; and I am glad to testify to the fact that it was due to the thorough training received through your method of teaching that I owe my knowledge of the fundamental principles of the law.

I have a friend who thinks he would like to take up the study of the law. Please send him particulars.

Wishing your School continued prosperity, I am,

Very truly yours,

NATHAN B. CHADSEY.

EVERYTHING AS REPRESENTED

474 Cleveland St., Brooklyn,

August 19th, 1910.

Gentlemen:

I hereby acknowledge the receipt of my diploma from your School. And also wish to say that I have found your School everything as represented.

Yours very truly,

E. A. ASHLY.

FROM AN OLD STUDENT NOW A SUCCESSFUL OHIO LAWYER.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 18, 1910.

Gentlemen:

Your system commends itself in my estimation as the most advantageous method of study by any person who is not attending the regular law school. It furnishes the student with the direction and outline needed to call his attention to the essential elements of the particular branch of the law which he has, at the time, under consideration.

In my case, I was teaching at the time I took a part of the course and used the method thus offered to supplement the general direction of the lawyer under whom I was registered. I found it suited exactly to the purpose, thus enabling me to secure advanced standing in the regular law school which I afterwards attended.

I desire to extend my grateful regards to the management of the school and am pleased to note its continuing success.

With best wishes for the future, I am,

Yours truly,

(Signed) O. F. HALTERMAN.

THOROUGHLY QUALIFIED FOR ADVANCED STANDING IN UNIVERSITY LAW SCHOOL.

Lexington, Va., Sept. 21, 1910.

Sprague Correspondence School of Law,
Detroit, Michigan.

Gentlemen:

I am in receipt of your favor of the 10th inst., for which accept my thanks.

Since writing you last I have entered the law department of the Washington and Lee University. Will say in passing, that owing to the thoroughness of my work with you and the efficiency of your excellent course, I am enabled to enter the Senior class here and find that my knowledge of the law is clearer and more thorough than many who spent their Junior year at this or some other college.

Very respectfully yours,

DOUGLAS G. TINSLEY.

A UTAH COUNTY CLERK PASSES BAR EXAMINATION—AN INTERESTING CASE.

Heber, Utah, December 29, 1910.

Gentlemen:

I take special pleasure in informing you that I took the State bar examination on the 10th day of October, in a class of twelve, including graduates of the Law Departments of Yale, Harvard, University of Michigan and University of Chicago, and was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of the State of Utah on October 11th; also that on December 5th, I was admitted to the bar of the Federal Courts of the District of Utah.

I have been slow, as I enrolled with you in June, 1902, borrowing the money to pay my tuition, but I have supported a family of seven, including myself, during that time, and am living in a much more comfortable home than when I began to read law. My license as an attorney represents to me my savings account of odd minutes (very few whole hours) during that time, and even if I should never practice law, I should consider it very valuable.

As it is, I retire from the County Clerk's office next Monday noon, and expect to hang out my shingle at Myton on January 15th. Wishing your school the success it deserves, I remain, with heartfelt gratitude,
CHAS. J. WAHLQUIST,
County Clerk

ADMITTED TO BAR IN MISSOURI.

Leavenworth, Kansas, December 27, 1910.

Dear Sirs:

I passed the bar examination in Missouri last May after studying with you for only a year and a half, and before I had completed your full course. The examination was unusually severe, a fact which is attested by the failure of 51 candidates out of a class of 149, of whom by far the greater majority were graduates of resident law schools.

Beginning January 1st, 1911, I will be practicing for myself in Kansas City, Mo., and would be glad to have you use my name as a reference to any young man who might be contemplating an enrollment in your course.

Very truly yours,

JOHN J. CASGROVE.

GETTING GOOD RESULTS IN CENTRAL AMERICA.

Bluefields, Nicaragua, December 17, 1910.

"The greater part of the work so far covered is review of studies successfully passed at the University before I came here, and I can now say that I am getting a great deal more out of the subjects than I did some years ago."

SAMUEL T. LEE,
American Consul.

ENDORSED IN CALIFORNIA.

San Francisco, California, December 9, 1910.

Gentlemen:

I am in receipt of the diploma of graduation from your school, and thank you very much for the same, being greatly pleased with it.

Your course is all that you claim for it and more. The knowledge that one may derive from the work as laid out by you is unbounded. Of course, diligence and an object in view are essentials, but I believe all young men have these two elements who are studying law. One of my employers is a director of the Hastings School of Law, another name for the law school of the University of California. He has expressed the opinion that you could not select better books for your students. Your book on Real Property, written by Hawley & McGregor, is especially fine. Everything is so clear, it is almost impossible to misunderstand the text. The same may be said of your other books; everything is grand.

Trusting that you will prosper in the good work you are doing, and hoping to hear from you some time in the near future, I am,

Appreciatively yours,

FRANK N. HICKMAN.

GREAT MENTAL TRAINING.

San Luis, Pampanga, P. I., October 11, 1910.

Sprague Correspondence School of Law,
Detroit, Michigan, U. S. A.

Dear Sirs:

I am sending the examination on Evidence. I have begun the work on Practice and find it very interesting.

In a few weeks I shall have finished the course. I have enjoyed the work immensely. I believe that I am better equipped mentally for having taken it. It seems to me that I can attack subjects other than the law in a more logical manner than I could before taking up this subject. I should have finished more than a year ago, but the nature of my work kept me away from home much of the time.

I am perfectly satisfied with the course as laid out by your school, and know that I could pass the examination in any state.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) JAMES H. BASS.

STANDS FIRST IN TEXAS BAR EXAMINATION.

Austin, Texas, November 19, 1910.

Gentlemen:

Your favor of the 4th inst. has been received. The examination to which I referred was the State Bar Examination; however, as I expect to complete the course with you, I am retaining the question sheet. I expect to renew work on the course tomorrow night.

I am just in receipt of a card reading as follows:

"Fort Worth, Texas, November 15, 1910.

Dear Sir:

The Board of Legal Examiners have returned their report and I am very glad to tell you that you made the best grade, your grade being a general average of 95. Only two passed. Will send you license soon.

Yours truly,

(Signed) J. A. SCOTT, Clerk."

I feel much pleased at my success in passing this examination, as it was a very stiff one, there being about one hundred questions on each subject. Ten days were consumed in the examination.

While communicating to you the above information, I desire to express my appreciation of the great assistance afforded by the course of study conducted by you, as I feel that without your guidance no amount of study would have prepared me for the examination within the same period of time.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) G. F. ZIMMERMAN.

RANKED WELL WITH UNIVERSITY GRADUATES IN NEBRASKA BAR EXAMINATION.

Nebraska City, Neb., June 13, 1909.

Sprague Correspondence School of Law,
Detroit, Mich.

Gentlemen:

Perhaps it will be of some little interest to you to learn that on the 8th and 9th of this month I took the examination for admission to the bar, and that I succeeded without any difficulty whatever. With me, participating in the examination were ten others, mostly students of law colleges, but at no point in the proceedings did any of them have any advantage over me and I was given to understand by members of the examining board that I ranked well with them. I have every reason to commend your course of instruction, especially in that during the three years that I have been required to study by the statutes of my state, I have not been required to lose any time from my regular employment on account of it.

Wishing you and all your students the success in their endeavors that has so far attended me, I am,

Yours very truly,

(Signed) J. S. MEYER.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC GRADUATE IN THE PHILIPPINES.

THE SUPREME COURT OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Manila, November 5, 1910.

Gentlemen:

I have the honor to inform you that I have been admitted to practice before all the courts of the Philippine Islands, as the result of having successfully passed the bar examination last month.

The examination extended over a period of three days. There were a hundred candidates who took the examination. Forty-six passed. I made a creditable showing and stood fifteenth in final average.

In conclusion, I desire to thank you gentlemen for your kindness to me, and to say this much in behalf of the Sprague Correspondence School of Law: I consider that it is the best correspondence school of law in existence; its methods are the best; its course is the most thorough; and its professors are as capable as can be found in any law school. I owe much to your school. I would not have been able to pass the bar examination had I not taken your course.

Wishing you more success, I remain,

Gratefully yours,

FRANK H. YOUNG.
Attorney-at-Law, Manila, P. I.
c/o Supreme Court.

HELPED HIM WIN ADVANCED STANDING IN RESIDENT SCHOOL.

Valparaiso, Ind., Jan. 8, 1910.

Gentlemen:

I have your letter of the 4th and thank you for your encouragement and help. Coming here, as I have, late, I am under a burden of discouraging circumstances, but the work under you has enabled me to swing into the classes, and I believe I can make it all right.

Again thanking you and assuring you I am a warm friend of your school and your thorough method of instruction, I remain,

Yours truly,

J. BUELL SWOPE.

We have many more students in other parts of the world successfully pursuing the study of law under our direction. This is only a small proportion of the names we might include in this list.

PROMINENT MEN

WHO HAVE STUDIED LAW WITH THE SPRAGUE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF LAW.

This list is far from being complete for two reasons: First, this School was founded in 1890; whereas the list goes back in the records as far only as 1895. Second, the information is gleaned from personal mention of the students' business or from letter heads, and as only about 2 per cent. of our students personally mention their business and not over 10 per cent. use letter heads, one can readily see how small a proportion this list comprises. It is no exaggeration to say that the list ought to be multiplied by five at least to get at the probable number in each division. Further, the list is not absolutely correct so far as the residences and, probably, present businesses are concerned. It must be borne in mind that constant changes in residences take place of which we are not advised, and further, that changes in business may occur. The list is as nearly correct as can be made from the information at our disposal. The business given is the business in which the student was engaged while studying law with us.
